a story of

Prosecutorial Misconduct!

a talk and discussion with

Clarence "Safwat" Davis

In 1972 Clarence Davis was convicted of first-degree murder in the death of a North Philadelphia bartender. In 2008, evidence was uncovered that the state had offered leniency to two witnesses prosecutors used to convict Davis. Then the witness who identified Davis as the shooter recanted his testimony.

The Superior Court ordered a new hearing, and a judge on appeals vacated Davis' sentence.

Davis comes to Lehigh to tell his story for the first time in public.
